

SUPPLEMENTARY DATA SYSTEM HANDBOOK

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR AND INDUSTRIES
DIVISION OF STATISTICS

301/195

INTRODUCTION

The supplementary Data System (SDS) is a Federal-State Co-operative program that produces occupational injury and illness data derived from reports filed with the State's Division of Industrial Accidents. SDS is the first major nation wide effort to standardize Worker's Compensation Data to achieve a substantial degree of useability, reliability and comparability. Information from the SDS system is unique in amount, detail and scope, thus providing analysts with opportunity for more extensive research than heretofore possible.

In 1973, the Bureau of Labor Statistics issued guidelines for classifying, coding, processing and tabulating Worker's Compensation injury and illness data. States participating in the SDS program submit certain required data elements. The required elements are: year and month of occurrence, nature of injury or illness, part of the body affected, source of injury or illness, type of accident or exposure, sex, industrial classification, occupational classification. Optional elements, age and length of service are included in the Massachusetts system.

The SDS program provides valuable information to safety and health policy makers, professional researchers, investigators, executives, administrators and individuals concerned with the prevention of accidents and illnesses to Workers. The Division of Statistics developed this Handbook as an aid to interpret the numerical data of the SDS program for analyzing injuries and illnesses suffered by Massachusetts employees. The ultimate goal is the reduction of the incidence of injuries and illnesses in the work place, improving the effectiveness of safety and health programs and the elimination of unnecessary pain and suffering to Massachusetts employees.
